Phillipe,

It was good meeting you and it was certainly a conversation that got me thinking.

I wish you well in the continuing development of your product and look forward to catching up in the future.

Thanks as well for the back links. I will be keeping them for future reference - although I am still in denial with respect to potential operation.

Kind Regards,

Johann

Dear Mr. Meeke,

thank you very much for the time afforded me on Thursday afternoon. I was very stimulated by the points you put across and have had time to reflect on them.

I have therefore decided, following a meeting the following day at Loughborough, to recruit a graduate full-time from June 09 to continue development of the system (to incorporate more modelling options) and concurrent with this, to establish a fully functional operation working from new premises in Loughborough.

This will enable me to fulfill both objectives of ongoing development together with marketing and selling the system during 2009-10 with a view to having a concrete proposal for coverage/pricing to revert to you at a future date.

In the meantime, my offer (unviewed on my laptop!) of Willis utilising my system and methodology for its' own risk management purposes, without cost, remains and may be of professional interest to those working in the e-risks field.

Regarding back injuries, as an aside, should you decide to consult somebody, I would strongly propose somebody leading the field such as my own surgeon, Mr. Peter Hamlyn

http://www.brainandspine.org.uk/about_us/who_we_are/peter_hamlyn.html or an exceptional physio such as Chris McLean who works in conjunction with Mr. Hamlyn.

I have not attached the user guide for the system, since this seems superfluous at this time, but should you wish to read it, please let me know in due course.

Best regards

Phillipe.
